NOTICE

Being available in front of the class before beginning of the class is a moral responsibility of a teacher, an essential parameter of punctuality, and a way of setting a good example in front of the students. A teacher coming late to the class is not acceptable.

The undersigned has noticed teachers rushing for the classes even after the scheduled time of beginning of the class. All teachers should stick to the schedule of the class as a moral and official responsibility of each individual.

It is further noticed that teachers who failed to engage a scheduled classes later talked of compensating the lost classes by taking extra classes. It should be noted that when a scheduled class is not engaged, the time of all the concerned students is wasted for which responsibility of loss of working hours squarely lies with the concerned teacher. The academic loss may be compensated but not by penalising the students and forcing them to sacrifice their time for other activities just for the convenience of such teachers. However, when a teacher engages an extra class to teach more and not just to compensate the academic loss because of his/her absence, then the students spends extra time in studies and that is a welcome.

All teachers should take note of the same for strict compliance.
